The Art of the Opening and Closing Statements in a Construction Trial

What is your theme? What will the evidence show?

How do you educate non-construction jurors about the case? And, then, how do you tie it all together in a convincing fashion? The opening and closing statements, very different in scope, are integral to making a solid start and impressive close to a trial. The message, techniques, and available technology are all inherently important parts of the process, particularly in construction matters.

The DRI Construction Law Committee is excited to present the next stage of DRI’s Litigation Skills Workshop designed to provide attendees with the tools necessary to shape these important segments of a trial. One-on-one and small group exercises will assure that you are ready to present your client’s case from start to finish. Act now to make a significant investment in your career.

Take advantage of this valuable opportunity to practice techniques with highly skilled trial attorneys.

View the seminar brochure and register for the seminar and workshop at http://bit.ly/DRIConstruction2020